A traveler came to an inn late at night. There was only one room available and the host told ① him to be very careful because the guest in the next room was a very light sleeper. So ② he made every effort to be silent as he got ready for bed, but ③ he dropped one shoe by mistake, making a crashing sound in the silence of the night. Sure enough, it awakened the man next door and the new guest heard ④ him toss and turn. So he managed to get the other shoe off in silence and got into bed. Just about daybreak, ⑤ he heard a pounding on the wall and a shout: "When are you going to drop the other shoe?"

Of all animals, they have most closely shared in human adventures and progress. For thousands of years, they have participated in the pleasures, the dangers, and the hard work that have marked human life. When food became scarce in one area, they helped people move to more productive areas. They carried people in hunting fields, in polo matches, and in races. Until the early 1900s they were a vital part of everyday life. After the Industrial Revolution, machines did the jobs that they had done, so their population dropped rapidly.

During the last several decades, Asia's glaciers have been melting at an alarming rate. According to Chinese researcher Yao Tandong, annual glacial runoff on the Tibetan Plateau and surrounding areas is roughly 20 percent more than that of 40 years ago. Some of that water is flowing into Asia's rivers, increasing floods and spreading waterborne diseases. In time, the problem will reverse. Yao predicts that 60 percent of the glaciers on the Tibetan Plateau will be gone by the end of the century. "Once the rivers decrease and finally disappear, oases will dry up and there will be no more cities."

24. There are good reasons to keep marine fish in the home aquarium. They are diverse, often beautifully colored, and their biology and behavior are endlessly fascinating. Even for the experienced freshwater aquarist, however, marine fish are considered challenging because it's difficult to keep the seawater quality and temperature stable in an aquarium. Unlike freshwater fish, many marine species have little _____ for variations in water quality and temperature. Therefore, keeping them in a home aquarium demands more monitoring and attention to detail.

- ① tolerance ② discrimination ③ effect
④ implication ⑤ distaste

25. While humans may have shifted from signs to speech long ago, Stokoe and Armstrong don't want people to consider sign language primitive — just the opposite. "My work in sign language," says Stokoe, "is to let people know that deaf people are just as bright and able to handle abstract thought as hearing people, given equal education. Prejudice against them because they don't speak leads to all sorts of bad judgments about deaf people. Recognizing the fact that we all probably owe a great deal to the era when language began _____ might change some of that. The first language may have been a language not of voices but of signs."

- ① with hunting
② with agriculture
③ in a gestural state
④ in logical thinking
⑤ in verbal communication

26. The philosopher Schopenhauer gave an example of porcupines trying to survive a cold winter. They huddle together for warmth, but their sharp needles hurt each other, so they pull away. But then they get cold. They have to keep adjusting their closeness and distance to keep from freezing and from getting hurt by other porcupines. Likewise, we need to get close to each other to have a sense of community, but we need to keep our distance from each other to preserve our independence. This duality reflects the human condition: We need other people to survive, but we _____

* porcupine: 고슴도치

- ① want to survive as individuals
② are all the same and all different
③ need to learn about other communities
④ don't need to worry about the future
⑤ should get close to each other

Rick Barry, once a pro basketball player, was famous for his underhand style for “free throws.” While Barry could easily sink nine out of ten shots, others, throwing overhand, fell far short. The key to his accurate free throws lies in the arc of the ball. “Because of the angle into the basket with a typical overhand throw, there is a smaller window for the ball to go in,” says Brancazio, a physics professor. “If the ball comes down at the basket from above — as when tossed up in a high arc, characteristic of an underhand throw — there’s a far _____.”

* arc: 호(弧), 포물선

- ① smaller chance of winning the game
- ② smaller chance of making a high arc
- ③ greater chance of throwing the ball fast
- ④ greater chance of making a successful shot
- ⑤ greater chance of shooting the ball overhand

Oil prices are at record highs because of short-term concerns over the security of ① supplies. With political stability, prices should go ② down again. But in the longer term, geologists say that the end of cheap oil is near. Since the 1960s, the rate at which new wells have been discovered has been ③ declining and there are probably no massive oil fields left. In the past, oil companies pumped as little as 50% of the oil from a well before moving on to easier pickings. As oil becomes ④ abundant, the pressure is on to find new technologies to ⑤ unlock this black gold.

We all make mistakes, have to deal with challenging colleagues, and face situations we are trying to turn around. At times it's so overwhelming that you have no understanding of the situation. Small pains seem monumental, and important things get pushed aside as if they were insignificant. It's not just that you can't see the forest for the trees; you're stuck down there, covered with leaves. Here's what to do. Rise above it. Rise so far above it that you feel 10,000 feet off the ground. Then you will have the insight you need to sort it all out. You will see what really matters in life.

33. If you have ever been near a sparking electric motor or a copying machine, or been in a severe lightning storm, you probably have smelled ozone. Its odor is unmistakable, but hard to describe. Ozone is oxygen that has undergone rearrangement from the normal diatomic molecule (O₂) to a triatomic form (O₃). A simple chemical equation summarizes the reaction: 3O₂ + Energy → 2O₃. Energy must be added for this reaction to occur, which accounts for the fact that ozone forms when oxygen is subjected to electrical discharge, whether from an electric spark or lightning.

- ⑤ 오존이 환경에 미치는 영향

34. Role theory takes the view that consumer behavior resembles actions in a play. As people act out different roles, they sometimes alter their consumption decisions depending on the "play" they are in. The criteria that they use to evaluate products and services in one of their roles may be quite different from those used in another role. In many cases, the purchaser and the user of a product might not be the same person, as when a parent picks out clothes for a teenager. In other cases, another person may act as an influencer, providing recommendations for or against certain products without actually buying or using them. [3점]

- ① the recommendation of products and services
- ② the behavior of consumers in different roles
- ③ the quality of products and services
- ④ the purchasing power of teenagers

Decrease / Increase in Back Pain After an Exercise Therapy Program

- ① The lowest percentage of the patients who exercised felt worse after the program.
- ② The program helped reduce pain in more than 80 percent of the patients who participated.
- ③ The patients who felt worse or no change in pain were greater in percentage than those who felt a moderate decrease.
- ④ There were fewer patients who felt a slight decrease in pain than those who felt a moderate decrease.
- ⑤ The patients who felt a significant decrease in pain outnumbered the total of the other participants in the program.

36. Diane Mason에 관한 설명 중, 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은? [1점]

Sculptor Diane Mason grew up in rural Illinois, surrounded by chickens, rabbits, squirrels, and birds. Mason recalls that she didn't care much for dolls as a little girl, but that she was fond of dressing up her favorite chickens in miniature clothes. "We had some very patient chickens," she laughs. In college, Mason majored in ethology, the study of animal behavior. Today, her fascination with animals plays a major role in her artistic life. She combines her knowledge about animals with humor in her bronze sculptures. "Some people think art has to be about anxiety, but I'm trying to give the viewer a little something to smile about."

- ⑤ 조각 작품에 해학적 요소를 가미한다.

37. kowtow에 관한 설명 중, 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

In ancient China, people, when presenting themselves before a superior, knelt down and bumped their heads on the floor. The "kowtow" ceremony was most commonly used in religious ceremonies when people came to make a request of the priest, or when foreign government officials appeared before the Chinese emperor. The word kowtow developed from a combination of two Chinese words, a verb meaning "to knock" and a noun meaning "head." Although British officials were resistant to kowtowing to the Chinese emperor, they did not object to the word, and by the early 1800s kowtow had become an English word for showing respect to another person.

- ① 두 사람이 머리를 맞부딪친다.

38. Some mental processes do slow down a bit in the course of aging. But in terms of learning new skills and information, older people are at no disadvantage. A recent study shows that aging does not affect the amount of material you can absorb in a given period. And once you've learned it, you'll probably retain it as well as a younger person. The better educated you are — and the more you continue to learn new things — the greater the likelihood you'll maintain high cognitive functioning.

* cognitive: 인지적인

- ① 나이가 들수록 정서적으로 민감해진다.
- ② 신체의 건강이 두뇌 활동을 강화시킨다.
- ③ 나이가 들어도 학습 능력은 쇠퇴하지 않는다.
- ④ 새로운 것을 배우고 기억하기는 어렵다.
- ⑤ 정보를 기억해 내려면 훈련이 필요하다.

39. Many people want 100% assurance that what is feared will not happen. Unfortunately, the need for a 100% guarantee is strengthened by several forces in our relatively safe and comfortable modern world. Movies and television programs confirm the illusion that all problems can be easily solved and that life should be safe and wonderful. We don't like to face the truth that uncertainty is a part of life. The tendency to look for someone to blame when something goes wrong implies that accidents "should not" occur. We demand that our medicine, transportation, food, and everything else be 100% safe. This is impossible.

41. Imagine the average workplace of 1900 — a place without calculators, computers, or even electricity in many places. When people in the future look back on 2005, what tool will they marvel that we functioned without? What devices will become commonplace that nobody has yet imagined? People capable of dealing with the future and the changes it holds are those who do not fear change and who practice flexibility. Your job will not be the same in twenty years. It just means you need to embrace innovation; otherwise you will not stay on top.

- ① Resist the Urge to Be Average
- ② Be Honest About Your Abilities
- ③ Seek Input from Your Opposites
- ④ Always Think About What's Next
- ⑤ Reflect on It Before You Take Action

42. Our success has come to be measured by what we do and what we earn, and we work even harder and longer to sustain lifestyles that are well above world standards. In recent years, however, an increasing number of Australians have concluded the pursuit of the dollar has been at the expense of happiness and well-being and have chosen to cut their working hours and income. This has been named “downshifting.” This decade, nearly a quarter of Australians aged 30 to 59 have downshifted. To downshifeters, it is a fair balance between income and free time that they try to achieve.

I lecture for about half an hour. Then, I notice that the students are beginning to look at the ceiling; one is feeling for his handkerchief; another shifts in his seat; another smiles at his thoughts, and so on. This means they are distracted. Something must be done. Taking advantage of the first opportunity, I make a joke. A broad grin comes on to a hundred and fifty faces, the eyes shine brightly, and the thunder of laughter is audible for a brief moment. I laugh, too. Their attention is refreshed, and I can go on.

(A)

When I was in school, my best friend was a young fellow called Shawn. He was very skilled at using words. In English class, whenever we had to write an essay, he always received the highest mark. Spending time with him was also great fun. Whatever Shawn did, I wanted to do, too. When Shawn decided to pursue writing as a career, I made the same choice.

(B)

Becoming a physician seemed to me to be an ideal way to begin to explore the human mind. I thought that by understanding the mysteries of the human body, perhaps I could someday get down to the level of the soul. If I had not met Shawn, I might never have developed my love of literature and writing. And if my father had acted differently, I might have become a journalist. I appreciate both Shawn and my father who led me to the life I enjoy so thoroughly today.

(C)

My father's dream for me, however, was that I should become a physician. When we sat down to discuss it, I told him, "No, I don't want to be a doctor. I have no interest in medicine. I want to be a great writer one day." Not long after, on my fourteenth birthday, my father gave me some great literature to read, including Of Human Bondage by W. Somerset Maugham, Arrowsmith by Sinclair Lewis, and Magnificent Obsession by Lloyd C. Douglas. Although he didn't mention it at the time, all these books were about doctors. And they made such a deep impression that they sparked in me a desire to become one myself.

(A)

I have a friend who spent most of his adult life insisting he couldn't write a book. This was very puzzling to me, because not only was he an excellent writer, but he also felt quite comfortable writing articles and chapters! One day I asked him to consider the idea that a book is nothing more than a series of interesting chapters put into sequence. Obvious as this was to me, he had never thought of it in those terms. Instead, he had always focused on the stubborn belief that writing a book was too big a project. This simple shift in thinking made all the difference. Two years later, he (a) his first book.

(B)

A giant truck got stuck under an overpass. The truck was too tall for the available clearance. The police called out the best, brightest, and most expensive engineers in the city to try to figure out what to do. They brought along their computers, clipboards, and calculators. They discussed the issue for hours. They simply couldn't figure out how to remove the truck without damaging the freeway above. Then a small boy, about seven years old, walked up to the men. "Excuse me, sir," the little boy said in a respectful tone. "Why don't you just let the air out of the tires?" Out of the mouth of a young boy, the problem was (b) .
