18. 밑줄 친 this useful device가 가리키는 것으로 가장 적절한 것은? [1점]

The history of this useful device dates back to the ancient times in Korea. Murals from ancient tombs show that the ones made of feathers were in use even before the 4th century. At first, it was just a device to cool with. But other uses were added as bamboo and paper came into use. For example, people covered their faces with it to avoid strong sunlight or to hide from their creditors, and sometimes they even flapped off flies with it. This device was also used in an artistic way by ancient scholars. They wrote a poem or painted a picture on it. In itself, it is just an appliance. However, a brush stroke on its white canvas creates a transformation and makes it a work of art.

* mural: 벽화

- ① 갓 ② 연 ③ 붓 ④ 우산 ⑤ 부채

19. 밑줄 친 prolonged scrutiny의 뜻으로 가장 적절한 것은?

When you observe the night sky with a telescope, you must be patient. If at first you don't see anything where a star cluster or nebula is supposed to be, keep looking. Then look some more. You'll be surprised at how much more of the scene comes into view with prolonged scrutiny: faint little stars here and there, and just possibly the object of your desire. After you see your object once or twice, you'll see it more and more often. After a few minutes you may be able to see it nearly continuously where at first you thought there was nothing but blank sky. * nebula: 성운

- ① a quick and casual glance
- ② a noble and tolerant attitude
- ③ long and careful examination
- ④ spiritual and material support
- ⑤ heavy and intense competition

21. Many people might think that they choose friends on the basis of personal characteristics such as intelligence, personality, interest, or even physical appearance. But a study of a housing complex for married students at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology suggests that _____ can be a decisive factor. Researchers asked couples to list their friends in the complex. They found that residents were far more likely to list the couple in the next apartment than the one that lived two doors away. A distance of thirty feet made the difference between friends and strangers!

- ① social position
- ② direct experience
- ③ physical distance
- ④ personal attitude
- ⑤ economic status

22. Employers should consider how to limit passive smoking at work. There are various methods of preventing or limiting exposure to smoke. Every workplace is different, and there is no universal solution. _____ is highly desirable for the smooth implementation of policies designed to limit exposure to tobacco smoke. A policy is very much more likely to be accepted by all employees if they feel they have been properly consulted. It is important to take time and make sure that details of restrictions on smoking are worked out and agreed on between management and employees.

* implementation: 이행, 실행

- ① Full discussion with employees
- ② Joint research among employers
- ③ Close relationship among smokers
- ④ Occasional contact with customers
- ⑤ Careful planning by the government

23. Children who are old enough to understand the idea of schedules and chores can understand the needs of your home business. Explain to your children that you do your work at home so that you can be near them when they need you. But also be sure they understand that you must do your work so that you will have the money necessary to keep your house, feed the family, and provide them with money for entertainment. Once your children understand the necessity of your work, then outline a work schedule and explain it to them. Then make sure they understand that between hours x and y, you will be doing work, and then tell them to

- ③ get over bad habits
- ④ set their goals high
- ⑤ respect your schedule

24. The first year of my college was terrible for me. I didn't know how to handle myself. I had a growing fear that I might flunk out. The turnaround came one day during my second semester, on a day when my English professor was returning some essay papers to the class. She held mine up, and I could see all the red marks and comments she had put on it. I thought, "Oh, what is she going to do? Criticize my work in front of all these other students?" Instead, she said, "Your grammar and spelling need a lot of work, Arthur, but this is an example of a very well-organized paper." Surely she had no idea what she had done for me. She had blessed me with an affirmation. She had shown me _____

- ① I could do something
- ② I was a poor writer
- ③ she was disappointed
- ④ how much she owed me
- ⑤ how useless criticism was

25. Jack이 겪은 심경의 변화로 가장 적절한 것은?

Jack arrived home from work one sunny afternoon. He noticed a letter on the hall table. He picked up the letter and opened it. The letter began: "Dear Jack, Congratulations! You have won an all-expenses-paid 5-day trip to Fiji! Thank you for entering the competition at Franklin's Supermarket at Downtown Shopping Center." He couldn't believe how lucky he was. He went into the kitchen and found a bottle of champagne. He sat back in the sofa and sipped on his glass of champagne. Then he noticed the date of the trip—March 20th. Jack screamed with horror. "I can't believe it! I'm going to kill the mail carrier! They're always late!" Today was March 21st.

- ① excited → relaxed ② delighted → angry
 ③ suspicious → confident ④ ashamed → satisfied
 ⑤ nervous → relieved

26. 밑줄 친 play both sides of the fence의 의미로 가장 적절한 것은?

Teenagers who feel insecure about their own status and popularity often try to reassure themselves by pointing a finger at someone who is obviously out. An insecure group leader may try to assert power by getting everyone in his/her crowd to mock an outsider. When dealing with a scapegoat, it's important not to play both sides of the fence, being compassionate to those who are being isolated while giving support and approval to the bullies who are tormenting them. Let the bullies know how angry you are about what they are doing.

* scapegoat: 희생양

- ① 상황을 회피하다 ② 이중적 태도를 취하다
 ③ 양쪽을 모두 경계하다 ④ 양쪽을 모두 비난하다
 ⑤ 최대의 효과를 노리다

27. 야영지에서의 사진 촬영과 관련된 유의 사항으로 언급되지 않은 것은?

There are a few things to keep in mind if you want to get perfect shots while camping. Take pictures of your family. Nature shots can be really nice, but you'll be looking at those old family camp photos in ten years. Bring extra batteries. Most cameras use really special batteries and you may not be able to find them at a camp store. Temperature can affect your batteries and film. If you are taking pictures in chilly weather, your batteries may die. Don't throw them away. Just warm them up and you'll be ready to shoot again. Film does not like heat so try to keep your film in a cool spot. You can't take too many pictures, so bring lots of film.

 ⑤ 충분한 양의 필름을 가져간다.

28. 밑줄 친 부분 중, 어법상 틀린 것은? [1점]

A stream in one of our state parks has always been my sitting spot. I am fascinated when I see ① the water bubbling over and down the rocks. The water has shaped the rocks, ② causing deep indentations in certain places, but other parts are perfectly flat. The sound of the water ③ runs under the bridge always grabs my attention. On the other side of the bridge is a pond ④ full of fish. Nearby there is a place where people can go swimming or just sit on the bank and ⑤ relax in the sand.

29. 빈칸 (A)와 (B)에 가장 적절한 것끼리 짝지은 것은?

When my grandmother began to have problems in seeing, hearing and walking, a number of family meetings were held. We discussed what we should do for her. We talked of placing her in a nursing home, but that idea was quickly given up. Although my grandmother would be with more people of her own age, she would see even less of her family, (A) her heart. Mother would not allow her own mother to grow old and weak in a strange place. She said, "I will not let Grandmother end up in a nursing home," and I admire my mother greatly for this decision. It was not an easy decision for her. When so many others are running away from the problem of (B) do about their old parents, my mother stands out remarkably.

I was working as a short-order cook at two restaurants in the same neighborhood. On a Saturday night, I was finishing up the dinner shift at one restaurant and hurrying to report to work at the second place. But I was delayed because one table kept sending back an order of hash browns, insisting they were too cold. I replaced them several times, but still the customers were dissatisfied. When I was able to leave, I raced out the door and arrived at my second job. A server immediately handed me my first order. "Make sure these hash browns are hot," she said, "because these people just left a restaurant down the street _____."

- ① kept serving them cold ones
- ② that kept serving them cold ones
- ③ kept them from serving cold ones
- ④ that kept serving themselves cold ones
- ⑤ and they kept serving themselves cold ones

Yet scientists tell us they are very valuable.

I had always thought of hurricanes as something mankind could do without. (①) But recently I learned that they are necessary to maintain a balance in nature. (②) These tropical storms, with winds up to 150 miles an hour, accompanied by heavy rains, glaring lightning, and roaring thunder, can be devastating. (③) They scatter a large percentage of the oppressive heat which builds up at the equator, and they bring enough rainfall in North and South America. (④) Therefore, scientists no longer try to prevent them from being formed. (⑤) They are convinced that hurricanes do more good than harm.

34. 글의 제목으로 가장 적절한 것은?

While we're traveling, we normally spend only a second looking at everyday objects. The day races past us without our really being aware of it. The average time we spend looking at things has been steadily decreasing during the last fifty years. We say that the world is going faster, but that might be because we are perceiving it faster. Just try looking at objects for at least five seconds. You can do this when you're walking or looking out of the car. You'll find that five seconds is a long time. This slight increase in the time we take to observe things can increase our passion for life and the quality of life.

- ① Spend Longer Looking
- ② Be Open to New Ideas
- ③ Don't Be Overprotective
- ④ Don't Believe in Yourself Too Much
- ⑤ If You're Not Sure, Guess Positively

35. 글을 쓴 목적으로 가장 적절한 것은?

The postal system became an avenue for bio-terrorism. Often fatal viruses sent in letters resulted in the deaths of innocent people. Such attacks are just one reason why we should seriously consider permanently shutting down the Postal Service and moving to a purely electronic mail system. But there are other good reasons for shutting down our old-fashioned system of physically transporting person-to-person letters. Specifically, continuing to move paper mail around is wastefully inefficient. Eliminating what has clearly become an old delivery system would put a stop to the millions of dollars the post office loses every year. We would also conserve precious natural resources, such as trees and water, and eliminate the pollution caused by the manufacture of paper.

37. Conversation can be on two levels—the content one and the feeling one. For example, yesterday my friend Scott came over and told me what Ann had done to him. I started to tell him why I thought Ann acted that way and Scott got angry and started fighting with me. After he left, I realized that he didn't really want me to explain why Ann was that way, but he wanted someone to understand his feelings because no matter why Ann did it, she really hurt him. I probably should have said something like, "She really made you mad, didn't she?" and waited until the next day to talk about it.

38. Although there are thousands of species of wild animals, surprisingly few species have been domesticated. The reason is that it takes special qualities to make animals suitable for domestication. They must be strong enough to withstand removal from their mother at an early age. They must breed freely in captivity and be easy to look after. Domestic or farm animals must be able to develop a liking for man, enjoy comfort, and accept confinement and control. And, of course, they must be useful: primarily as a source of food, but also in the provision of wool or hide for clothing and sometimes as a means of transport or pulling power. *domesticate: 길들이다

- ① ways to domesticate wild animals
- ② difficulties in domesticating animals
- ③ the importance of farm animals in daily lives
- ④ traits of the animals that can be domesticated
- ⑤ differences between wild animals and farm animals

39. 대학에 대하여 필자가 주장하는 바로 가장 적절한 것은?

I went to a large university well-known for its basketball team. Most of the time when I'm asked where I went to school, people recite its basketball statistics rather than its academic excellence. It is seldom that I hear someone say, "Oh, your university has an excellent library!" Universities waste far too much money and attention on sports activities, often doing harm to academic programs. In my opinion, however, only a small portion of students are on athletic teams, yet the majority of students use the university library. Universities need to give more money to the library than to sports activities. This would greatly benefit the university libraries with new books and new computer equipment.

If anyone, including the police, decides to drive down High Point Street on any summer night, he will find it too dangerous to pass. The potholes have been fixed, but the speeding motorbikers are turning the narrow street into a race track as they try to outrun each other. The bikers are roaring along the High Point Street without any police enforcement. The police don't seem to have seen any reason to slow down the speeding motorcycles racing through the street. It seems like a waiting game: either this summer will end without anyone getting injured, or the speeding bikes will cause a fatal accident. There is a lot of time left in the summer season. (A)

* pothole: 도로에 난 구멍

- ① Drivers must wear seat belts while driving.
- ② The city must make sure the streets are cleaner.
- ③ The city council must increase the budget for the police.
- ④ The parents must be tolerant of their children's behavior.
- ⑤ The city police must take immediate action for our safety.

Many scientists have long believed that either a change in climate or widespread disease killed the world's huge animals, such as the woolly mammoth. Some evidence suggests, though, that these theories may be incorrect. In Australia, scientists have dug up bone and eggshell fossils that indicate a massive die-off of large animals about 46,000 years ago. This extinction occurred after humans arrived on that continent about 52,000 years ago. These time frames suggest that people are responsible for the animals' disappearance. Similar evidence comes from North America. Humans arrived there about 13,000 years ago. Approximately 1,200 years after their appearance, about thirty species of large animals were gone.

Life is unfair. Yet life is good. Our ability to thoughtfully deal with the unfairness and build on the good can make the difference between a happy and unhappy life.

One reason so many of us cannot get out of pain easily is our tendency to think, "That shouldn't have happened to me. That was unfair." When we allow such thinking to dominate our thoughts, we begin to bear resentments.

Some years ago, Fortune magazine conducted a survey of many of the CEOs of Fortune 500 companies. The goal was to try to find traits that these successful people had in common. Surprising to say, there weren't many! Some of these top executives had gone to excellent universities, others not. Some brought years of experience to their jobs, while others had enjoyed a quicker rise to success. One of the few things they shared was that, along the way, they had each experienced a major career setback. Most of them, in fact, had been fired from at least one job. Understandably, none of them at the time felt they had been treated fairly.

Dwelling on life's unfairness and cruelties will not make your life better. Those CEOs learned to move beyond setbacks. We might even conclude that, without confrontation with negative events, they would not be where they are today.

George Roth made a deeper study of calorie restriction. He said that eating significantly less food keeps blood sugar levels lower and allows body cells' protective mechanisms to work better. One of his studies showed that calorie restriction benefits cells by slowing a damaging process that harms the structures of living cells.

(B)

Despite the positive effects suggested by these studies, though, according to a study on calorie restriction involving twenty healthy young men who cut their food intake in half for six months, the subjects became depressed and irritable. And they had very low energy and lost interest in doing things. When they were allowed to eat again, they ate up greedily.

(C)

The study of the low-calorie diet has a long history. In the 1930s, Clive McCay, a nutritionist, discovered that rats deprived of food lived longer and looked younger than rats on a normal diet. Since then, additional studies have shown that in animals from fruit flies to mice, decreasing food intake by about 30 percent results in a 30 percent increase in life span.

Convinced that education is their best hope for the future, many Kenyan parents are willing to make great sacrifices to send their children to high school. They quickly discover, however, that there are not enough schools for everyone. Even the high schools run by the government are too expensive for many families.

Kenyans have found an answer to the problem in harambee, a word that means _____. As part of the harambee movement, many villages built their own high schools. Villagers organized fund-raising campaigns instead of expecting their government to help them. Church groups donated some of the money. Those who had no money to give donated their labor.

Students in harambee schools are aware that they are not getting as good an education as those who attend more expensive schools. Only two harambee students in 1,000 will attend a university. Why then do so many students continue to flock to harambee schools? They point out that if they did not go, they would have no chance at all of going to college. They enthusiastically tell visitors, "Yes, the chances are slim, but I think that I can succeed."

It is easy to see another person's bad attitude but difficult to admit our own. I should have realized that it was my negative attitude that really annoyed me, not the doubled commutes. I wasn't sleeping well at night; I felt nervous. One's body is, after all, prone to weakness or failure when one is subjected to continued stress. And the early signs of such problems were already beginning to show.

Yet (A) my wife, I began to calm myself down. I tried to relax in the car. I allowed myself more travel time and tried not to let the traffic and (c) the slow movement annoy me. While I couldn't change the traffic flow, I could change my attitude toward it.

Big doors swing on (d) little hinges. Most of the time, we don't see small hinges. We don't pay attention to them. They're small and hidden. Yet (B) them, the door would not function at all.

Our attitudes, too, are the little hinges on which the big doors of our lives swing. We can't control life's negative circumstances — the doubled commutes, (e) long lines at the grocery, or late-night calls from marketers. Those are life's invariables. Yet we can do something to cope with them. We can control how we relate to them. It's a simple choice, a simple step you can take. The right attitude will keep all the mechanisms of your life in top working order. Choosing the right attitude will profoundly change your life.
