A hundred years ago in most of the world, people didn't have much choice about the work that they would do. If their parents were farmers, they became farmers. The society and the tradition determined their profession. Twenty years ago in many countries, people could choose their livelihood. They also had the certainty of a job for life. But they usually couldn't choose to change from one employer to another or from one profession to another. Today, this is not always the case. Career counselors tell us that the world of work is already changing fast and will change dramatically in the next twenty-five years.

The typical ten-year-old has a recognition vocabulary of over twenty thousand words—and has been learning many hundreds of new words every year since the age of four. You were once that typical child. What was your secret? Did you spend hours every day looking up a dictionary? Did you keep notebooks full of all the new words you ever heard or read? You had a much better, much more effective, and considerably less self-conscious method. Your method was the essence of simplicity: day in and day out you kept learning; you were a question box, for you had a constant desire to know and understand.

In some English-speaking countries, as you wait in the checkout line at the supermarket, you might notice something that looks like a newspaper. You read the headlines: "Woman Gives Birth to Baby with Two Heads!" or "UFOs from Mars Land in Soccer Stadium Parking Lot." Trust me. These are not newspapers. They are trash. To be more accurate, they are called "tabloid" newspapers, simply the worst examples of "yellow" journalism. If your goal is just to acquire a little vocabulary and have some fun, go ahead and read them. But don't expect to find actual news or good writing or the truth.
